1. During May 1953 the Chinese Communist Ministry of Communications convened a meeting of officials of the responsible North China party, administrative, and military departments to discuss measures to relieve the shortage of trucks and cars in North China. This shortage had been growing since February and was caused by the transfer to North Korea of over 400 trucks belonging to the state-operated Transportation Company (sic) of North China and by the large number of obsolete cars in North China requiring constant repair.
